A One-Sided Argument.

A penitent looking man was on trial for vagrancy and disturbance of the peace. The judge seemed inclined to be lenient with him.

"What was the prisoner doing when you arrested him?" he said to the policeman.

"He was having a very heated argument with a cab driver, your honor."

"But that doesn't prove that he was the worse for liquor," the judge said. "Many sober people have arguments with cab drivers."

"So they do, your honor," said the policeman, "but in this case there was no cab driver."

Juvenile Philanthropy.

One of Harry McCordell's pickups: "The back yard of a house in a Mississippi city is overlooked by the windows of an orphan asylum. In this back yard stood a barrel of apples, which were disappearing at a rapid rate."

"The woman of the house, a widow, and a knowing mother, summoned her 8-year-old son to inquiry touching the curious disappearance of the fruit."

"Yes, mother, I've eaten the apples," he confessed, "but I really had to do it!"

"Had to do it?"

"Yes, mother, the orphans wanted so many cores."
